Think. Do.
Find an uncharted path.
Whether in the seminar room, on the streets of downtown Las Vegas, or in the Mojave Desert, our program blends theory and practice in unconventional ways.
Merging environmental topics with material culture studies, oral history, and digital humanities, our MA and PhD students research, plan, and implement public history projects that find inspiration in our surroundings, Las Vegas and the American West sit at the nexus of labor, immigration, environmental, and cultural history.
Our "brand" of public history is just like our city – unapologetically unique.
Home of the Harry Reid Chair Endowed Chair in the History of the Intermountain West, Susan Lee Johnson, author of Writing Kit Carson
Hosting the Pacific Coast Branch of the American Historical Association with a graduate assistantship. Also recruiting for assistantships with the statewide preservation initiative Preserve Nevada andThe Southwest Oral History Association.
